Day 1 / Fri 30.6.

18:30–19:00 / HAU1

Opening

Guests: Erica Malunguinho

Hosts/Moderation: Curatorial collective “Beyond Equality”

Languages: Brazilian Portuguese and English with English, Brazilian Portuguese and German simultaneous translation
After a short introduction into the questions of the gathering on the revolutionary democratization of the everyday, by the curatorial collective, Erica Malunguinho will give the opening speeches of the event. Erica Malunguinho is a Brazilian politician and the first transgender person to be elected to a Brazilian state parliament.

19:00–20:30 / HAU1

Conversation: “Transnational feminisms: the desire to change everything”

Guests: Verónica Gago, Parvin Ardalan, Dilar Dirik, Erica Malunguinho / Host/Moderation: Elif Sarıcan

Languages: Brazilian Portuguese and English with English, Brazilian Portuguese and German simultaneous translation
From the Kurdish “World Women’s Democratic Confederation”, to the mobilizing power of the Women’s Strike in Argentina, the experiences of Transfeminism occupying parliamentary positions in Brazil and the feminist lead revolution in Iran: these movements challenge oppressive systems with the desire to change everything. The debate aims at sharing and learning from each other’s experiences as well as pointing out common grounds and differences, in order to reshape transnational feminist strategies for changing the very fabric of our world.

21:30–23:00 / HAU1

“Roda de Conversas” WORLD CAFÉ – Meet and Greet
Guests: TranStyX: Tunisian Queer Art Project, speakers and all organizations, Lorena Burbano (Mujeres de Frente, Ecuador), Gabriela Germany (Women’s Movement in the Philippines), Jeem, other speakers and all organisations / Moderation: Curatorial collective “Beyond Equality”

Languages: various languages with consecutive translation
On various roundtables installed on the stage of HAU1, intimate occasions for discussion among the speakers and the visitors of the gathering will be created: to enable personal encounters and deeper exchange and networking, based on different inputs from the curatorial collective, on the main questions of the gathering, like: de- and anticolonial feminist struggle, planetary care work, socialization of social reproduction, gender violence or transfeminism.

Tag 2 / Sa 1.7.

10:00–11:00 / HAU1

Conversation: “From Abya Yala to Kurdistan challenging the complicity of liberal feminism: sovereignty of the everyday”

Guests: Lorena Cabnal, Dilar Dirik, Maria Do Mar Castro Varela / Host/Moderation: Margarita Tsomou

Languages: Spanish and English with Spanish, English and German simultaneous translation
Far from demanding an “equal share” in today’s toxic capitalist violence, concepts of communitarian feminism – from Abya Yala to Kurdistan – re-invent ways of dealing with the reproduction of life: communal care for bodies, for children, the elderly and planetary forces, the creation of sustainable urban and rural communities and demands of the socialization of reproductive labor, are discussed as ways for food-, water- and land sovereignty, as well as for political sovereignty.

IWS – International Women Space

With: Denise Garcia Bergt

Languages: English

What is the value of documenting ourselves in our own words? This question will be discussed, while sharing the experiences of documentation by the International Women Space (IWS): In 2021, despite the Pandemic, we met and interviewed women, who spoke about migration, asylum and post-war divided Germany – the German Democratic Republic (GDR) and the Federal Republic of Germany (FRG), colonialism, racism and European borders. This became the series “Kämpferinnen” we will share some of these videos and discuss the potential of self-documentation. IWS was founded by and for women in 2012 during the occupations by refugees of Oranienplatz and the Gerhart Hauptmann School in Berlin Kreuzberg. IWS has published books, produced dozens of podcasts and videos.

Workshops / Getting to know & self-presentation of collectives

Limited capacities / Registration requested via tickets@hebbel-am-ufer.de

Meeting point for all workshop participants: HAU3 (Tempelhofer Ufer 10, 10963 Berlin)

*Cenî & Jineolojî / “From Jin Jiyan Azadî to World Women’s Democratic Confederation”

With collective moderation

Languages: Kurdish, German, English

As the resounding slogan “Jin Jiyan Azadî” echoes around the world, we, will discuss the rich history and political significance of this inspiring chant, in the joint workshop of CENÎ – Kurdish Women’s Office for Peace and Jineolojî. We will introduce Jineoloji, the Kurdish science of women, as well as its role in shaping the past, present and future of this slogan, delving into the courageous struggle that has brought it to fruition. The knowledge of women*, between the construction of women's democratic confederalism and ecological self-government, is central to Kurdish life. In discussion we will demonstrate how the production of women's liberationist knowledge propel us towards the international quest for World Women's Democratic confederalism.

 S.U.S.I – Interkulturelles Frauenzentrum Berlin & Quilomboalle “Roda de Conversa: From Quilombism to Black Feminism – Intersectionalities among us”

With: Jamile da Silva e Silva, Sandra Bello

Languages: German and Portuguese

How to articulate unity in our struggle as black women in the context of diasporic, migratory and fleeing context within the colonial epicenter? Dialogues on generational griotage (griotagem geracional), autonomy, institutionalities, feminism and Quilombolismo.

Feminists 4 jina “A life of hope and despair: local struggles and internationalist feminism”

With collective moderation

Languages: English

In the light of the recent feminist revolutionary movement in Iran, feminists4jina, a network of feminist activists and collectives in different cities outside Iran, will put into discussion the potential and challenges of connecting local activism with internationalist feminist struggles.

Casa Kuà

Decolonizing and re-imagining our bodies – a sharing circle
With: Tzoa

Languages: English

Together we will create a collective space of sharing stories, exploring strategies, rethink and reinvent our own narratives. A narrative that gives us the inspiration and strength for our daily struggles and fights. Through those struggles on so many layers, it's easy to lose the connection to ourselves and our bodies. This is a space where we can (re)connect to our body and (re)imagine our relationship to it.

This workshop is only open for all trans and queer BIPOC/ racialized people.

14:30–16:00 / HAU1

Dialogue: “Against Capitalism and its Extractivisms: From Body-Territory to Feminismos Comunitários and Agroecologia in Latin America”

Guests: Lorena Cabnal, Carmen Cariño, Miriam Nobre, Louise Wagner / Host/Moderation: Barbara Marcel, Camila Nobrega

Languages: Spanish and English with Spanish and English simultaneous translation

The primitive accumulation of capitalism was only possible due to the exploitation of the colonial project of Eurocentric growth, combined with the intersection of extraction of (un)paid labor from feminized bodies. How can knowledges such as Agroecology, ecofeminisms, territorial communitarian feminism, Indigenous and Afrolatinoamerican feminisms, and struggles linked to peasant, worker, non-cis-heteropatriarchal movements confront the existing monocultural worlds? The debate will address pluriversal paths of possible connections between feminist struggles and the right to territories and livelihoods from non-dominant perspectives of buen vivir.

16:15–18:00 / HAU1+HAU3

Workshops

Limited capacity / Registration requested via tickets@hebbel-am-ufer.de

Meeting point for all workshop participants: HAU3 (Tempelhofer Ufer 10, 10963 Berlin)

Planetarian feminisms: reframing ecofeminism for anti-extractivist politics of care

Host: Margarita Tsomou / With: Dalia Gebrial, Carmen Cariño, Miriam Nobre, Şermin Güven, Nazan Üstündağ, Camille Barbagallo

Languages: Spanish and English with simultaneous translation

Feminist ecologists know that gender and ecology are connected: not only because the feminized are more affected by climate catastrophes and are at the forefront of movements against land grabbing. But because there is a structural link between social reproduction and our relationship to nature: in colonial-capitalist patriarchy gender and nature relations serve the exploitation of both, (feminized) reproductive as well as planetary regenerative labor, as “free resources”. In the workshop, we discuss this classical argument of ecofeminism against the background of anti-extractivist transnational feminist movements and develop it further: what are today's entanglements of colonial mechanisms with extractivist exploitation and the crisis of (feminized) social reproduction?

Understanding & Resisting the Many Faces of War, in Defence of Life

Host: Elif Sarican / With: Iida Käyhkö, Dilar Dirik

Language: English

Structures of war and militarism pervade every aspect of society. From patriarchal violence in the home, to military and policing technologies on the streets, to propaganda in the media: in this workshop we will dissect the impacts of war and militarism, its gendered aspects and the role of women*, between peace making and armed struggle. Unmasking the multilayered system of war that oils the capitalist machine must be a priority for a feminist defense of life.

Feminisms and Revolutions in the Middle East and North Africa

Host: Firoozeh Farvardin / Mit: Soma Rostampour, Himmat Zoubi, Nesrine Jelalia, Sara Abbas, Songül Karabulut

Language: English

The Middle East has experienced revolutionary movements in the past decade, with feminists playing active and strategic roles in these uprisings. The workshop will facilitate an exchange on commonalities and differences of feminist strategies, forms of mobilizations, and concrete demands, during the revolutionary processes in the region.

Femicide and Gendered Violence:

Feminist Counter-Strategies

Host: Bahar Oghalai / With: Feminist Autonomous Center for Research (Greece) (Myrto Tsilimpounidi & Anna Carastathis), Christina Clemm, Fatemeh Karimi, Verónica Gago

Language: English and German with simultaneous translation
Beyond the individualist conception of victimhood, Ni Una Menos and feminist movements all around the world articulate that femicide and gendered violence are not accidents of misbehavior – but inherent aspects of patriarchal and capitalist structures that (re-)produce their dominance. To discuss the resistance to femicide and gendered violence from a transnational perspective, we draw on collective concepts as well as legal strategies in different contexts, such as Iranian, German or Greek.

Transnational Feminist and Queer Solidarities – Continued

Host/facilitators: Agata Lisiak, Aysuda Kölemen, Galina Yarmanova

Languages: English

What does it mean to be in solidarity with another's struggle? How do we amplify others' voices without falling into the trap of speaking for them? What does it mean to offer solidarity from a distance, besides shaping public conversation and organizing in one's current locale? This conversation-centered workshop is part of a series of ongoing exchanges organized by the multi-sited initiative "Transnational Feminism, Solidarity, and Social Justice project".

Day 3 / Sun 2.7.

11:00–12:30 / HAU1

Conversation: "Breaking Barriers: On Queer and Gender Dissidence beyond borders"

Guests: Rub(en) Solís Mecalco, Maria Galindo, Zethu Matebeni / Host/Moderation: Camila Nobrega

Languages: Spanish and English with Spanish, English and German simultaneous translation

In most parts of the world queer and sex-gender dissidences are still marginalized or prosecuted; at the same time queerness tends to be instrumentalized rhetorically in diversity mainstreaming policies or even foreign politics. The panel focuses on diverse concepts of gender dissidences in different transnational contexts – indigenous, decolonial and other – to question the binary concepts of gender and sexualities as well as their appropriations of neoliberal queer feminisms.

Workshops

Limited capacity / Registration requested via tickets@hebbel-am-ufer.de

Meeting point for all workshop participants: HAU3 (Tempelhofer Ufer 10, 10963 Berlin)

The Political Economy of race and reproduction

Hosts: Bafta Sarbo, Bahar Oghalai / With: Miriam Nobre, Iida Käyhkö, Dalia Gebrial, Luci Cavallero, Encarnación Gutiérrez-Rodríguez

Languages: English, Spanish with simultaneous translation

Feminist and antiracist movements have always been dealing with questions of class and capitalism at their core. Within the last years many concepts have emerged that address the conceptualization of the relationship between race, gender, and class. In this workshop we will discuss the question of how systems of racism, patriarchy and capitalism interconnect and how social movements address this interconnectedness.

19:00–21:00 / HAU1

Assembly: "No 'equal share' – Beyond Equality: What kind of feminisms do we need?"

Guests: all participants, speakers and organizations of the gathering / Host/Moderation: Curatorial collective "Beyond Equality"

Languages: English, Spanish and German with simultaneous translation

In the last decade feminism and diversity seem to have become popular concepts: in marketing, liberal rhetorics but also in governance and foreign policies, demands for "equality between the genders" seem to be established. But demands for an "equal share" in the modernist-progressive paradigm, seem outdated in the collapsing capitalist (eco)system. In the assembly concluding the day, we will bring together the content discussed in the workshops and discuss contradictions of liberal (Western) feminisms. In doing so, we will bring together the elements of feminisms whose transformative, political projects address colonial and social dispossession, patriarchal violence, and the ongoing ecocide.

Feminism Unchained: Embracing Abolition and Challenging Carceral Feminism

Host: Elif Sarıcan / With: Becka Hudson, Nazan Üstündağ, Sabine Hark

Language: English

Join us for a workshop to explore feminism beyond the confines of the liberal carceral paradigm, that demands more policing and juridical state punishment to confront gendered violence. Because sexual assaults are connected to other forms of structural (state) violence, like racial profiling, police violence, border regimes, wars or economic dispossession. What would a feminist abolitionist position look like? We will explore the potential of abolitionist feminism in transforming society and examine the interconnections between gender liberation, the critic of police violence and militarism.

Alternative Feminist Investigation Media Strategies

Host: Camila Nobrega

With: Barbara Marcel, Andrea Dip, JIN TV, Lara Bitar

Language: English and Spanish with simultaneous translation

Traditional media systems are terrains rooted in cis-hetero patriarchal perspectives of narrating the world. Nevertheless, feminist collective and intersectional perspectives are building new autonomous arrangements of storytelling, investigative journalism, and community-based documentation. This workshop will give the floor to people and collectives who will share their strategies, struggles and paths to build new meanings of journalism from different local and cross-border contexts.

Emotions in Movements

Host: medico international e.V. / With: Verónica Gago, Jule Govrin, Débora Medeiros

Languages: English

What role play affects and emotions in mass mobilization? Under which conditions does their politicization become emancipatory, and under what conditions are they authoritarian? Mass protests ignite with affective impulses: The shared experience of violence and oppression becomes a key promoter for emancipatory movements when suffering and fear are turning into rage. Organizing rage over structural violence repeatedly finds expression in queer-feminist and decolonial mass protests on the one hand. On the other hand, emotions are regressively transformed into resentment and hatred against marginalized groups under right-wing populists and authoritarianism. This workshop aims to understand the role of emotions in mass mobilization from a feminist-activist and socio-psychological perspective.

Feminized labor at the intersection of class, migration and the state of late hyper-capitalism

Host/Moderation: Margarita Tsomou / Guests: Delal Atmaca, Liad Hussein Kantorowicz, Maternal Fantasies, Camille Barbagallo

Languages: English/German

Feminized labor is systematically undervalued, underpaid and often not even seen as labor: this applies to all the spheres of social reproduction labor that was assigned to the feminized as their “natural obligation” to do so. Parting from (migrant) domestic work, the medical care sector, sex work and maternal labor, we will discuss the conditions of feminized labor in current capitalism and ideas for a socialization of care work.

15:30–17:30 / HAU1

Round Table “Neoliberalism & authoritarianism connected: Gendered Violence – how to fight back” (co-organised by IRGAC-RLS)

Guests: Evren Savci, Luci Cavallero, Ewa Majewska, Eva von Redecker / Host/Moderation: Firoozeh Farvardin

Languages: Spanish and English with Spanish, English and German simultaneous translation

Anti-feminist politics have become the cornerstone of current neoliberal authoritarian regimes across the globe. Neoliberalism, though in different fashions, has gone hand in hand with the rise of authoritarian rule, far-right movements and religious conservatism, e.g. in Turkey, Argentina, Brazil or Poland. In these contexts the conjunction between neoliberalism and authoritarianism has intensified gender violence in various forms, for example as anti-abortion laws, anti-trans politics, state femicide or gendered impoverishment. The debate discusses the key strategies of each context for resisting various forms of exploitation of our bodies and of the extraction of vital resources. How do we reclaim life, despite increased neoliberal repressions?

18:00–20:00 / HAU1

Conversation: “Feminism and the New Right: Resisting “divide and rule” – on the continuities of antiracism and feminism in migrant struggles in Europe

Guests: Simone Dede Ayivi, Encarnación Gutiérrez-Rodríguez, Sabine Hark, Jamile da Silva e Silva / Host/Moderation: Bafta Sarbo

Languages: English and German with English and Spanish simultaneous translation

Anti-migration rhetoric fueled by a renewed nationalism has been a defining issue for the new right in Germany. Within the past decade right wing movements raised concern for women’s safety as a key argument against migrants coming to Germany. These movements have been directly or indirectly supported by a conservative branch of feminism that positions migrant men as a threat to German and migrant women. How can feminist and antiracist movements resist this divide and rule?

1.7., 18:00 and 2.7., 17:30 / HAU4, HAU1 Foyer / Afterwards available at the HAUthek on www.HAU4.de

Connect! Online talks / Participation via Zoom and in the HAU1 Foyer

1.7.: Perrxs del Futuro with PachaQueer / 2.7.: Sandra Bello (Quilombo Allee) with Coletivo Sapato Preto

Languages: Spanish, Brazilian Portuguese, English

In the online space, international networks, organizations and movements connect across physical barriers and overcome them. With their demands, queer-feminist actors reach a large public on social platforms and new alliances are formed. For this occasion HAU4 is becoming an online meeting place that connects beyond spatial and geographical borders. With “Connect!” online talks with multi-perspective movements will take place. Everything is possible. Joint actions are called for or possibilities for joint support are shown.
